STRIKERS IN A RIOT IN SALT LAKE

SALT LAKE CITY, Feb. 2.—Fights, which in the aggregate amounted to a riot and one shooting, occurred this evening as the Oregon Short Line employees employed to replace strikers were leaving the shops here.

Until February 1 the non-union men were lodged in a stockade furnished by the company. As the danger of demonstrations seemed to be over the stockade was closed. Strike sympathizers gathered at the shop force dispersed from the buildings this evening. Missiles were thrown at individual non-unionists, and there were dozens of fights among the hundred or more men in the vicinity.

One of the strikers, Elmer Olson, a striker, was shot in the thigh by H. G. Thurman, a non-union man. Thurman surrendered at the police station and Olson went to a hospital.

Elmer Olson, is aged 25 years, and was formerly an employee at the Harri man shops in the Oregon Short Line yards. H. G. Thurman, is aged 23 years, a strike-breaker and boiler-maker employed by the Oregon Short Line company. The scene of the shooting was at the south gate of the railway yards in North Salt Lake. The bullet entered Olson's left hip. The wound is not expected to prove fatal unless infection sets in.

Olson, who resides at 718 West Fourth North street, declares that he was attacked by about seven men, while Thurman asserts that he was attacked by about seven men. Thurman says the strikers threatened to lynch and stone him, and that after he had been chased a short distance by the strikers, a rock struck him in the back, whereupon he turned and fired at his pursuers. A few minutes after the shooting, Thurman appeared before Lieutenant John Hempel at the police station and gave himself up.

"I guess you're looking for me," said Thurman to Lieutenant Hempel. "I had to do it to protect my life. They threatened to stone and lynch me, and my life was in danger." Thurman is married and his young wife followed her husband to the police station. At her own request, she was given a room in the woman's ward, so that she might be near her husband. The couple have no children.

Will Likely Recover. Shortly after 6 o'clock last night, a call came to the police station that a man had been shot at the north yards. The patrol wagon answered the summons and Olson was taken to the emergency hospital, where his wound was examined by Dr. H. G. Sprague, assistant city physician. It was found that a bullet from a 32-caliber Colt's automatic revolver had penetrated into the fleshy part of the left hip. Unless infection sets in, Dr. Sprague does not expect the wound will prove fatal. Olson was later removed to St. Mark's hospital. Late last night he was resting easy.

E. B. Harmon, 47 West Sixth South street, who is employed as a shopman for the Denver & Rio Grande and who was with Olson at the time of the shooting, accompanied the wounded man to the police station. Harmon said that Olson and himself were standing outside of the south gate of the north yards when Thurman came from the yards. He said that Thurman passed them and, after he had proceeded a few feet, turned and fired at them without the slightest provocation, wounding Olson. Another young man accompanied the wounded strikers to the emergency hospital and, when Olson was being questioned, said to him, "Don't talk too much, kid."

Thurman last night made the following statement concerning the shooting: "After work, I went out of the south gate of the north yards. Congregated around the gate were about twenty-five strikers. I was accompanied by a young fellow, but I don't know his name. After we went through the gate I went one way and the man who came out with me went the other way. As we passed the strikers I heard the crowd of men growling and swearing. Followed by Crowd.

"I believe about seventeen of them took after me and the others after the other fellow. I heard one of them cry, 'Get a rope! Hang him!' They asked me what I was doing. I told them it was none of their business. I told them that I was going about my own affairs, and that I was going home. 'You'll never get there,' one of them cried.

"We had been walking during this conversation and I had just passed a pile of cobblestones. 'Hit him behind the ear,' one of them cried. 'Hit him, pardner,' I said and started to run. Then a cobble struck me in the back. I didn't know how near they were to me or that they intended to do other than hit me, so I turned and fired a shot. This was more to stop them than anything else.

Thurman and I have been in Salt Lake but a few days. The police believe that the strikers congregated at the gate of the north yards for the purpose of 'spotting' strike-breakers.

Two months ago Joseph Hayden, a striker, was shot and fatally wounded by two Italian strikebreakers, Frank Malazia and Raffaele Pucci, near St. Marks hospital. The Italians were returning to the north yards and alleged that after leaving the car at the terminal of the Warm Springs line, Hayden and another striker, Gudmund, attacked them. Hayden died at St. Marks hospital in a few days after the shooting. Malazia and Pucci are awaiting trial in the district court on the charge of murder.

NEED ARTILLERY AND CAVALRY

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—Serious concern in the war department over the scarcity of cavalry and field artillery organizations in the national guard has led to a formal announcement that it is the policy of the department to encourage these branches and that unallotted funds from federal militia maintenance appropriations will be used for that purpose. The state's military is top-heavy with infantry, probably because it is so much easier and cheaper to organize and maintain.

The attention of the department has been directed also to the fact that many state infantry regiments are not fully recruited. This is regarded as false economy, as the same number of expensive officers is required for a regiment of eight companies as for one with the full quota. Consequently the military division has issued a circular bulletin warning state authorities against authorizing any additional infantry regiments, until those already in existence are complete as to organization, arms and equipment.

Noncommissioned officers of the regular army assigned to duty as militia instructors have been given the title "sergeant-instructor" in a formal war department order.

EIGHTY THOUSAND TO BE AT BELFAST

LONDON, Feb. 2.—The Morning Post Belfast correspondent is responsible for the statement that from 60,000 to 80,000 men will gather at Belfast next Thursday, the date of the proposed home rule meeting, animated by intense hatred over what they regard as the treachery of Winston Spencer Churchill, first lord of the admiralty, and Lord Parnell in advocating home rule for Ireland.

The correspondent says 30,000 men will be armed with revolvers and a great majority of them also with clubs, which will be one foot longer than the police batons. The Dublin castle authorities, the correspondent concludes, are cognizant of the preparations and are aware that 7,000 troops will be necessary to keep order, but so far they have done nothing.

ANSWERS THE CALL.

Ogden People Have Found That This Is True.

A cold, a strain, a sudden wrench. A little cause may hurt the kidneys. Spells of backache often follow. Or some irregularity of the urine. A splendid remedy for such attacks. A medicine that has cured thousands.

Doan's Kidney Pills, a true kidney remedy.

Many Ogden people rely on it. Here is Ogden proof.

Mrs. George Wahlen, 2860 Grant avenue, Ogden, Utah, says: "Kidney complaint came on me gradually three or four years ago and I spent a great deal of money experimenting with doctors' medicines and so-called kidney cures without being helped. Finally Doan's Kidney Pills were brought to my notice and I procured a supply from Bader's Pharmacy. They helped me from the first and the contents of seven boxes entirely removed the backache and corrected the kidney disorder. I always keep Doan's Kidney Pills on hand and when ever I have the opportunity, I recommend them."

ABDICATION DECREE TO BE PUBLISHED

PEKING, Feb. 2.—Premier Yuan Shi Kai's troops continue to come into the capital. When 20,000 men have been concentrated here, it is said, the decree announcing the abdication of the emperor will be published.

It is reported here that the viceroy of Hukwang, province of Shansi, has signed an agreement to join the republicans and lead a republican army into Peking if this step should be necessary to compel the emperor's abdication.

A revolutionary force has arrived at Taimo, which is situated in neutral territory near Kichow. The Germans have protested against this force stopping at Taimo, declaring that such action infringes upon the provision of the treaty of Kichow.

NEW YORK, Feb. 2.—Bradstreet's will say tomorrow: Trade and industry are not moving in consonance with the highly-keyed anticipations, but in general business tends to expand, following a relatively quiet period in January. Visiting buyers are not making heavy purchases, and in small lots, to cover only actual requirements and not to anticipate them in a speculative sense. Staples are in most request, but the leading dry goods markets display a comparatively good uplift, with prices on some makes of good tending to harden.

Railroads are having fair success, results throughout growing sections of the south and some parts of the southwest offsetting comparatively good developments elsewhere. No marked spirit of expansion is expected until weather conditions become more settled, but consumptive demands are sufficiently heavy to prevent stocks from accumulating, and in lines that are relatively depressed, lumber manufacturing for instance, outputs have been curtailed to such an extent that stocks cannot accumulate.

Shoe buyers are expected to go higher; supplies of leather are more light, production being below normal; cotton goods are firm, worsted yarns are firmer, silks are steadier, and the strike situation in New England has improved.

New business in finished steel is somewhat quiet. Business failures in the United States for the week ending

LA FOLLETTE AND WILSON SPEAK

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 2.—Woodrow Wilson, governor of New Jersey, and Senator La Follette were the guests of honor and principal speakers at the seventh annual banquet of the Periodical Publishers' association of America here tonight. Don C. Seitz, of the toastmaster's association, was the toastmaster. Other speakers were Mayor Blankenburg and Detective William J. Burns.

More than 600 of the leading publishers, writers and editors of the monthly and weekly magazines were present. Colonel George Harvey of Harvey's Weekly was a guest, but he and Governor Wilson were at widely separated tables.

Both Governor Wilson and Senator La Follette spoke on the "Problem of Popular Government."

Governor Wilson said that while he is a firm believer in the representative form of government, but when it ceases to represent the people some other form must be found to correct it.

"There are two theories of government," he said. "There are some people who believe that those who have the biggest material stake in the development of the country should guide its government. I have heard many a speechmaker in the last few months who did not include himself when speaking of the people."

He quoted at length from the bill of rights to show that all power was vested in, and consequently derived from the people, even before the constitution was adopted.

"In state after state," he said, "where the legislators will not act for them, the people are seeking a means of recovering the direct power of the common judgment."

"Progressiveness means not getting caught standing still when everything else is moving," declared Mr. Wilson. "Our whole business system has changed, but our laws have not been changed."

Senator La Follette in his address said that organization of combinations had increased from 1898 to 1908, from $3,784,000,000 to $31,672,000,000. He gave as a panacea for this the amendment of the Sherman law, in which he urged the enactment of specific prohibitions against well known practices that constitute unreasonable restraint of trade.

"One of these," he said, "is the brutal method of the Standard Oil company of cutting prices in any place where there is a competitor in order to kill him off, while keeping up prices in other places. In the play a villain, a frivolous matron, a wayward girl nor an adventuresome. Nowadays it is a rare occurrence to visit the theatre without having to hear the doing and misdoings of one or more such characters on the stage. Mr. Klein has displayed a keen knowledge of what is a most desired by the public of today. The cleanliness of 'The Lion and the Mouse' has been a huge factor in the remarkable success enjoyed by this interesting and well told story of certain phases of America's money world."

STORY REFRESHINGLY NEW.

A notable feature of Charles Klein's "The Lion and the Mouse," which the United Play Company brings to Ogden theater on Sunday, February 4, is the wholesome and distinct drawing of the various characters in the story. There cannot be found in the play a villain, a frivolous matron, a wayward girl nor an adventuresome. Nowadays it is a rare occurrence to visit the theatre without having to hear the doing and misdoings of one or more such characters on the stage. Mr. Klein has displayed a keen knowledge of what is a most desired by the public of today. The cleanliness of "The Lion and the Mouse" has been a huge factor in the remarkable success enjoyed by this interesting and well told story of certain phases of America's money world.

TRADE REVIEWS

NEW YORK, Feb. 2.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade will say tomorrow:

Monetary conditions give the keynote to the whole business situation. The accumulation of surplus funds in New York has made about the cheapest money market in the world, and has enabled it to loan at least 150,000,000 abroad, making this country, for the time being, a powerful creditor nation. This is a condition of immense strength. The iron, steel and steel trade, while operating still somewhat below full capacity, maintains fairly its recent gains. The strike at Lawrence causes some restrictions in textiles, but wool is fairly active. A number of the large western trade centers report an encouraging outlook for the spring trade. Copper is weaker. Retail business now is influenced by weather conditions which in most sections have not been favorable to active distribution.

Bradstreet's Report.

HEARINGS TO BE HAD ON BILL

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—The senate committee on finance will begin hearings Tuesday on the house bill revising the iron and steel tariff. The committee so decided today. No opposition was made by the Democratic members to the Republican proposition for hearings and the work will be expedited as much as possible.

Members of the committee express the belief that the hearings will be completed within the next two or three weeks.

Senator La Follette, who was present at today's meeting of the committee, gave no intimation regarding his position on the bill. He said he had had no opportunity to study the matter and was unprepared to express an opinion on its merits. Even if he should unite with the Democratic members in support of the bill, the regular Republicans on the committee would outvote the commission, unless the senate should adopt the addition resolution, providing for the addition of one Democrat and one progressive Republican to his committee.

Some of the regular Republican express apprehension that his course may be pursued.

The committee consists now of eight regular Republicans, six Democrats, and Senator La Follette, progressive Republican, making fifteen members. The addition proposed by Mr. Newlands would give the Democrats and progressive Republicans a majority in case they should unite.

The committee is receiving a large volume of mail from interests affected by the proposed new tariff. One concern objected to a reduction of the tariff on umbrellas and parasols, and Rockaway, N. J. mills said the reduced tariff would destroy their business.

Other committees voiced similar views.

The Overland train suffered no damage and proceeded.

What Do You Think of W. R. Hearst?

Do you think he is all bad, half and half, or all good? Don't answer that, not even to yourself, before you have read the story about William Randolph Hearst in Pearson's Magazine for February. Look at the things he really has done for you, for which other people are getting credit. See whether you think he is a presidential possibility. Read what he thinks about some things which will be talked about from now until a president is elected. You ought to know what every presidential possibility thinks about these things. They concern your daily prosperity a great deal, and are vital to your future prosperity. And then you'll know whether you are for or against Hearst. But don't decide until after you have read this story.

In the same issue of this magazine, O. C. Barber, "The Match King," explains what the present method of financing railroads means to every family in the land. James Creelman tells about the plot against cheap sugar; Richard Barry gives the third instalment of the wonderful story of "The Four Hundred"—the real story of "high society." Anthony Partridge continues "The Court of St. Simon," the greatest novel of mystery of the year. And besides, there are seven splendid complete stories.
